The Bar Council Family Law Committee ("FLC") is organising the third workshop in Introductory Interdisciplinary Training that meets the standards set out by the International Academy of Collaborative Professionals ("IACP").

Traditional litigation is positional rather than interest-based. Litigation is protracted, and escalates parties' stress and trauma. It also is expensive. The aim of the CP process is to assist parties to achieve consensual and peaceful resolutions to their disputes. This process also enables other professionals such as accountants and mental health specialists to play their parts in the process. CP provides a platform and opportunity for the parties' self-discovery and widens the perspectives of the parties.

Upon completion of this training, participants will meet the IACP Minimum Standards for Introductory Interdisciplinary training. Participants will also qualify for IACP membership. Space is limited to 25 participants.

Speakers

Jacinta Gallant is a respected collaborative lawyer, conflict trainer and innovator. She is recognised internationally for her insightful and experiential approach to teaching and managing conflict, and has been welcomed as a trainer throughout Canada, the United States, Europe, Australia and Southeast Asia. Her law practice Waterstone Dispute Resolution focuses exclusively on CP and mediation.

Jacinta has been a member of the IACP Training Faculty and has delivered introductory and advanced interdisciplinary training to hundreds of collaborative professionals. Her innovative resources, Our Family in Two Homes, help clients prepare to engage deeply, and productively, in CP and mediation. She integrates the "Insight Approach to Conflict" in all of her work, and her goal as a trainer is to help family law professionals meaningfully engage with clients, manage conflict more effectively, and get more enjoyment out of this important work.

Participants are expected to attend all scheduled sessions and have access to reliable internet connections to participate both by video and audio. Completion of all scheduled sessions is required in order to receive a CPD accreditation and certificate of completion.

A highly skilled and experienced Canadian and US-based training teams have been put together to conduct the online Introductory Interdisciplinary Training. This training will start from 8:00 am to 12:00 pm on the following dates:
